The ACLP 2.0 is not only more efficient in terms of time taken, it is also more effective in preparing learners for their roles. I congratulate the Institute for Adult Learning on putting together a programme that will bring the industry to the next level!

A CUT ABOVE THE REST

Are you ready for the evolution in Training and Adult Education (TAE)?

The Workforce Skills Qualifications (WSQ) Advanced Certificate in Learning and Performance (ACLP) programme has been revised to equip today's professionals with the ability to adopt an open-minded, innovative mindset, and the skills to adapt, adopt and facilitate effective learning beyond the classroom.

Despite its shorter duration, the revised ACLP known as ACLP 2.0, is recognised as equivalent to the previous version in relation to the Skillsfuture (SSG) Adult Educator (AE) qualification requirements policy. There is no compromise on the programme rigour as ACLP 2.0 still comes with 6 Statements of Attainment (SOAs). In fact, learners can look forward to more opportunities for social learning, increased engagement with facilitators, and immediate provision of feedback from facilitators.

ACLP 2.0 has been revised with the intention of making learning a process, and not a destination. Upon completion of the programme, learners are encouraged to continuously upskill themselves with available Continuous Professional Development (CPD) courses to embark on their lifelong, life-wide, and life-deep learning journey.

I am happy with the ACLP 2.0 as it gives learners better work-life balance in comparison to the previous version of ACLP which had assignments that felt repetitive and similar. On top of that, the revised ACLP also upholds the same level of Technical Skills and Competency Knowledge which is great!
